

HELPERS ROAD SAFETY AUDIT REVIEW TRAINING
Indiana LTAP is looking for volunteers
to help perform Road Safety Audit Reviews (RSAR)

What is a Road Safety Audit Review (RSAR)? A team of four to five people with expertise in roadway safety or traffic review a roadway section or intersection and identify countermeasures to improve safety. The RSAR typically includes the identification of low-cost improvements, and it may used to support a request for federal safety funding for more substantial improvements.

How does the RSAR process work? Indiana LTAP will have a project coordinator that will receive and coordinate requests for RSARs. The coordinator will furnish the volunteer reviewers with basic information about the safety concern prior to the inspection, lead the inspection team, and be responsible for documenting the details of the review and the resulting recommendations.

What does a volunteer need to do? Volunteers review the information furnished to them by the HELPERS coordinator, provide their own transportation to the location of the review, provide comments and suggestions within their area of expertise, and provide comments on the report assembled by the coordinator. Volunteers should expect that the review will take a full day but will not require overnight travel.

We'd like to have a large number of volunteers from a wide geographical area, with varied interests and areas of expertise. Volunteers will be asked to attend a one day training session in December to learn more about the background and objectives of the project, and learn about the procedure for performing an RSAR. Volunteers can come from a variety of backgrounds: FWHA Indiana Division and Midwest Resource Center; INDOT Central Office and District Offices; Academia; County Engineers and Highway Supervisors; City Engineers and Street Commissioners; Construction and Highway Safety Contractors; Consulting Engineers; Active and retired members of professional associations such as APWA, ITE, NACE, ATSSA, NHTSA, MPO's and others.

Are you unable to volunteer but still interested in attending? Anyone is welcome to attend. Join us to learn how to identify countermeasures that can be implemented to improve safety. Road Scholars will receive six (6) points for attending.
